EXPLANATION

The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) mandates that 3 different dispute resolution procedures be offered within each state—mediation, special education state complaint, and administrative due process hearing complaint. NH RSA 186-C:23 requires that additional forms of alternative dispute resolution be available to NH families and school districts—neutral conference and IEP team meeting facilitation. Dispute resolution in special education can best be described as a continuum of significance. The mildest form of dispute resolution offered in NH is IEP team meeting facilitation, with the continuum graduating to neutral conference, mediation, special education state complaint, and, most significantly, administrative due process hearing complaint. The goal of IEP team meeting facilitation is to repair communication breakdowns within IEP teams to mitigate the need for more significant, costly, and litigious dispute resolution processes further in the continuum. IEP team meeting facilitation is unique as a dispute resolution process because it is the only one that occurs within the context of an IEP team meeting, which allows for the individuals who know the student best—teachers, service providers, evaluators, and, of course, parents—to make decisions regarding the student. All other forms of dispute resolution occur outside of the IEP team meeting process and therefore begin to externalize the decision-making. The ultimate example of this being a hearing officer issuing a written decision as a result of an administrative due process hearing complaint.

To abide by the requirement to offer IEP team meeting facilitation as an alternative dispute resolution process, the New Hampshire Department of Education (Department) seeks to contract with two facilitators who will perform the work either in-person or virtually, attending IEP team meetings around the state and supporting these IEP teams with their communication and fostering an environment of collaborative problem-solving. These facilitators will also contribute to materials developed by the Department to educate New Hampshire parents and school districts about IEP team meeting facilitation.

A Request for Proposals (RFP) was originally posted on the Department of Education and Department of Administrative Services websites on February 3, 2026. The Department received four (4) proposals from the issuance of the Request for Proposals “IEP Facilitators”. A review committee consisting of 3 Department staff members reviewed and scored the proposal. SLM Special Education Consulting, LLC’s proposal met the criteria of the Request for Proposals (Attachment A).

SLM Special Education Consulting, LLC’s contract is one of two to provide services as an IEP Team Meeting Facilitator. Ms. Millora, the member of SLM Special Education Consulting, LLC, also has decades of experience in the field of special education, having recently served as a director of student services for a New Hampshire school district.

The Department would like to contract with SLM Special Education Consulting, LLC, because of her vast experience in special education law, her experience with conflict resolution, and her strong interpersonal communication skills that have already proven to be effective in IEP team meeting facilitation.

Respectfully submitted,
